1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Plaintiff respectfully submits this Opposition to the Defendants’ Motion to 3 Dismiss Plaintiff’s Complaint (hereafter “Motion”) filed by defendants Altamirano, 4 Turner, Kinney and Huffman (hereafter “Defendants”) pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. § 5 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

6 References are herein made to the lawsuit underlying the malicious 7 prosecution claim, San Diego Superior Court, Case No. 37-2015-00028262-CU-BT-
8 CTL (hereafter “Direct Suit”) and the shareholder derivative lawsuit Johnson filed 9 on Storix’s behalf, Case, No. 37-2015-00034545-CU-BT-CTL (“Derivative Suit”).
10 For clarity and consistency with their concurrent motions and filings, Johnson herein 11 incorporates Defendants’ request for judicial notice in support of their Special
12 Motion to Strike (hereafter “MTS RJN”). The complaint in this action (ECF No. 1) 13 is hereafter referenced as “Complaint”.

14 Defendants attempt to dismiss Johnson’s complaint by making numerous 15 legal conclusions without providing any authority, and based on facts unrepresented 16 in the Complaint or any judicially noticeable documents. Johnson satisfied his low 17 burden of showing the causes of action in the Complaint are sufficiently pled.

18 First, the malicious prosecution claim is based on an action filed and 19 maintained under the direction of the Defendants, wherein Storix’s only successful 20 claim is severable from the complaint when determining favorable termination of the 21 underlying litigation for numerous substantial reasons. Second, Defendants assert 22 res judicata on nearly every cause of action without reference to any prior claims, 23 rulings or relevant issues decided in any prior litigation. Third, Defendants ignore 24 the delayed discovery rule when asserting that Johnson’s conversion claim is barred 25 by the statute of limitations. Fourth, Defendants were not protecting Storix by 26 causing it to breach its contract with Johnson, and Defendants were strangers to the 27 contract. Fifth, as majority shareholders, Defendants are liable for Storix’s breach of 28 contract. Defendants provide no reference to facts or authorities supporting their

1 contention that the claim is barred by res judicata or statute of limitation. Sixth, 2 Johnson properly alleged rescission as an alternative to the breach of contract claim, 3 which is properly asserted against Defendants for rendering Storix insolvent for their 4 personal gain. Finally, Johnson’s indemnification claim is properly asserted against 5 Defendants for all the same reasons as the rescission and breach of contract claims.

6 Johnson respectfully request the Court deny Defendants’ Motion, thereby 7 requiring Defendants to answer the Complaint without further delay.

8 II. LEGAL STANDARD

9 Dismissal for failure to state a claim under Fed.R.Civ.P. § 12(b)(6) is a 10 disfavored remedy and may only be granted in extraordinary circumstances. (Broam 11 v. Bogan, 320 F.3d 1023 (9th Cir. 2003); United States v. Redwood, 640 F.2d 963, 12 966 (9th Cir. 1981).) On this motion, all allegations of material fact must be 13 accepted as true and construed in the light most favorable to Plaintiff. (Cahill v.
14 Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 80 F.3d 336, 337-8 (9th Cir. 1996); In re Silicon Graphics, 15 Inc. Sec Litig., 183 F.3d 970, 983 (9th Cir. 1999).) The Court must also draw all 16 reasonable inferences in favor of the non-moving party. (Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S.
17 662, 668 (2009); Matsushita Elec. Industrial Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S.
18 574, 587 (1986).) If this Court finds the Complaint inadequate, it should “freely give 19 leave to amend when there is no undue delay, bad faith, dilatory motive, undue 20 prejudice to the opposing party by virtue of... the amendment, [or] futility of the 21 amendment.” (Fed.R.Civ.P. § 15(a); Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182 (1962).)

22 III. ARGUMENT

23 A. Claim 1: Plaintiff’s Claim for Malicious Prosecution Does 24 Not Fail as a Matter of Law

25 Johnson’s claim is legally sufficient in that it establishes liability of the 26 Defendants regardless of the capacity in which they committed the tortuous acts.
27 Johnson established favorable termination of the underlying litigation after severing 28

1 the unrelated claim and directing the malicious prosecution action to only the non-2 severed claim.

3 1. The Underlying Action Was Commenced and Maintained
4 Under the Direction of the Defendants

5 Defendants can't escape liability for commencing and maintain a malicious
6 action simply because Johnson sued them "in their capacity of shareholders." 7 Defendants escaped liability in prior actions by asserting were sued "in their 8 capacity as officers and directors" and were thus shielded by the business judgment 9 rule. Here, Defendants assert without authority that they can't be held liable as 10 shareholders either. They are wrong. "All persons who are shown to have 11 participated in an intentional tort are liable for the full amount of the damages 12 suffered. [Citations.]" (PMC, Inc. v. Kadisha (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 1368, 1379-13 1381.) "Shareholders, officers, and directors of corporations have [also] been held 14 personally liable for intentional torts when they knew or had reason to know about 15 but failed to put a stop to tortious conduct." (Id. at pp. 1387-1388.) More 16 importantly, a malicious prosecution cause of action stands on "a prior action [that] 17 was commenced by or at the direction of the defendant[.]" (Bertero v. National 18 General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal.3d 43, 50, underline added.) There "does not appear to 19 be any good reason not to impose liability upon a person who inflicts harm by aiding 20 or abetting a malicious prosecution which someone else has instituted." (Lujan v.
21 Gordon (1977) 70 Cal.App.3d 260, 264.)

22 2. The Direct Suit Terminated in Johnson's Favor Based on the 23 'Severability Rule'

24 The only successful claim against Johnson was based entirely on an email 25 Defendants claim Johnson sent to all Storix's customers. Under the exclusive control 26 of Defendants, Storix demanded $3,739.14 for "employees' lost productivity" due to 27 the "fallout" of Johnson's email. (Complaint ¶ 27.) The claim is severable from the 28 "entire lawsuit" when determining favorable termination because:

- 1 (a) Defendants falsely alleged the event occurred when Johnson was living 2 in California (Id. ¶ 23);
3 (b) The email didn't exist until after the Direct Suit was filed (Id. ¶ 23); 4 (c) The claim was not pled or asserted during the litigation (Id. ¶ 27);
5 (d) The claim was based entirely on facts separate from Storix's 6 unsuccessful claim on which the malicious prosecution action is based; 7 (e) The claim could be brought in an independent action;
8 (f) The claim is pending appeal (Complaint ¶ 27, fn. 5).

9 Defendants were notified in the Complaint that the claim was severed from 10 the favorable termination determination. (Complaint ¶ 27, fn. 5). As a result, they 11 attempt to misconstrue cases that don't address the severability of claims into ones 12 that "disfavor" severability. It would do violence to Johnson's right to petition if 13 Defendants were allowed to use such a trivial claim to bar Johnson's malicious 14 prosecution action. Fortunately the "severability rule" is specifically designed to 15 prevent plaintiffs and attorneys, as in this case, from asserting trivial claims to 16 protect themselves from liability for malicious lawsuits. There are no circumstances 17 that better warrant severing a claim than this.

18 "[A] malicious prosecution plaintiff is not precluded from establishing 19 favorable termination where severable claims are adjudicated in his or her favor." 20 (Lanz v. Goldstone (2015) 243 Cal.App.4th 441, 460 (citing Sierra Club Foundation 21 v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1152-1153); See also Tabaz v. Cal Fed 22 Finance (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 789, 794 (Tabaz) (holding that a plaintiff may base a 23 malicious prosecution claim on individual claims if the other claims are severable 24 and not "simply different theories for recovering on the same injury".) The 25 "severability rule" was created in Paramount General Hospital Co. v. Jay (1989)
26 213 Cal.App.3d 360, based on the severability analysis in Albertson v. Raboff (1956)
27 46 Cal.2d 375 (Albertson).

1 Defendants' arguments rely on Lane v. Bell (2018) 20 Cal.App.5th 61 (Lane)
2 and its references to Crowley v. Katleman (1994) 8 Cal.4th 666 (Crowley). Neither 3 case actually involved severable claims but both reference the severability of claims 4 established by Albertson. Defendants state that "Lane rejected prior cases that held 5 favorable termination could be based on a 'severable' claim." (Motion at p. 5.) This 6 is not true. Lane noted the severability analysis of the cases it cited, which often 7 found that favorable termination was not established because the underlying claims 8 were not severable. Their argument is also inapplicable because Johnson does not 9 assert favorable termination based on the severable claim but based on those that are 10 not severable. Defendants fail to understand that "[a] claim for malicious 11 prosecution need not be addressed to an entire lawsuit; it may, as in this case, be 12 based upon only some of the causes of action alleged in the underlying lawsuit."
13 Franklin Mint Co. v. Manatt, Phelps & Phillips, LLP (2010) 184 Cal.App.4th 313, 14 333.) In Paramount, the court reversed a lack of favorable termination determination 15 in stating, "[T]he fact that [defendant's] numerous claims may all be broadly 16 deemed to be alleged breaches of fiduciary duty does not enable [defendant] to 17 sidestep the severability rule... ." (Id. at 370.) The Defendants in this case attempt to 18 do exactly that.

19 Defendants provide no authority that defeats severability of the claim in 20 Johnson's Complaint because the cases they cite that base favorable termination on 21 the "entire lawsuit" didn't involve severable claims, nor did they disapprove the 22 severability rule. Defendants' argue that "Lane rejected prior cases" by making an 23 ambiguous reference to StaffPro, Inc. v. Elite Show Servs., Inc. (2006) 136
24 Cal.App.4th 1392, 1403 (StaffPro). (Motion at p. 5.) StaffPro didn't disapprove 25 severability, it just didn't find favorable termination because "the underlying 26 defendant did not prevail on every claim asserted in the underlying action ...
27 because the judgment awarded affirmative relief to the underlying plaintiff[.]" 28 (Lane, supra, 20 Cal.App.5th at 74, underline added.) Storix's only successful claim

1 was never asserted in the underlying litigation (until closing arguments), and Storix 2 was denied all eleven demands for injunctive relief based on all the facts – including 3 the email on which Storix’s belated claim was based.

4 Crowley is the hallmark case on the “favorable termination” issue. “Crowley
5 specifically approved Freidberg’s conclusion there was no favorable termination 6 under the facts of Freidberg.” (Lane, supra, 20 Cal.App.5th at 75, underline added.) 7 “[T]he action had evidently not terminated favorably to Freidberg because the 8 judgment assessed substantial damages against him.” (Ibid.) Also, the Friedberg 9 claims were not severable because “Reasonable value of services, joint venture and 10 tortious interference were simply different theories for recovering on the same 11 injury: the failure to share attorney fees.” (Tabaz, supra, 27 Cal.App.4th at 794; 12 citing Freidberg v. Cox (1987) 197 Cal.App.3d 381, 388.) Friedberg expressly 13 recognized, however, that the result would have been different had the causes of 14 action been severable. (Friedberg at p. 387-388.) StaffPro didn’t reject the 15 severability rule, but rejected favorable termination because “[t]he trial court’s order 16 in the underlying action required StaffPro to take remedial action with respect to 17 many of the core allegations[.]” (StaffPro, supra, 136 Cal.App.4th at 694.) Lane and 18 StaffPro properly found an absence of favorable termination under the facts of 19 Friedberg, but Storix’s only successful claim was based on entirely different facts 20 and theories and all demands for injunctive relief were denied.

21 Lastly, Crowley relies “exclusively on the settled rule that an appeal may be 22 taken from only a portion of a judgment when that portion is ‘severable’ in the sense 23 that the issues raised in the appeal can be resolved without regard to the issues 24 determined by the portion of the judgment that was not appealed.” (Crowley, supra, 25 8 Cal.4th at 387, citing, inter alia, American Enterprise, Inc. v. Van Winkle (1952) 26 39 Cal.2d 210, 216-217.) The disposition of a separate and independent claim which 27 is not appealed from may be considered final for the purposes of malicious 28 litigation. (Albertson, supra, 46 Cal.2d at 378.) Johnson is appealing the severable

1 claim, thereby further severing it from the “entire lawsuit” and establishing 2 favorable termination. Had Johnson not appealed the claim, he still would have 3 established favorable termination since he directed the probable cause element of the 4 malicious prosecution action to only the non-severable claim. (Complaint ¶¶ 39-40.)

5 3. Johnson Has Established Lack of Probable Cause

6 In stating that “[a] verdict favorable to Storix in the underlying action 7 conclusively establishes ... probable cause”, Defendants conflate the favorable 8 termination and lack of probable cause elements of a malicious prosecution action.
9 (Motion at p. 6.) "A claim for malicious prosecution need not be addressed to an 10 entire lawsuit; it may ... be based upon only some of the causes of action alleged in 11 the underlying lawsuit." (Lane, supra, 20 Cal.App.5th at fn. 6.) “As our Supreme 12 Court stated in Singleton v. Perry (1955) 45 Cal.2d 489, 497 [289 P.2d 794], 13 'Indeed, it would seem almost a mockery to hold that, by uniting groundless 14 accusations with those for which probable cause might exist, the defendants could 15 thereby escape liability ....'” (Tabaz, supra, 27 Cal.App.4th at 792, citing Singleton
16 v. Perry (1955) 45 Cal.2d 489, 497; Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 17 39 Cal.4th 260, 292 [“An action for malicious prosecution lies when but one of 18 alternate theories of recovery is maliciously asserted”].) Johnson directed the cause 19 of action only to Storix’s unsuccessful claim that Johnson was operating a 20 competing business. (Complaint ¶¶ 39-40.) The fact that Storix prevailed on a 21 different claim doesn’t establish probable cause for bringing or maintaining the 22 malicious one.

23 "Where there is no dispute as to the facts upon which an attorney acted in 24 filing the prior action, the question of whether there was probable cause to institute 25 that action is purely legal." (Ross v. Kish, 51 Cal.Rptr.3d 484, 495.) "[T]he probable 26 cause element calls on the trial court to make an objective determination of the 27 'reasonableness' of the defendant's conduct, i.e., to determine whether, on the basis 28 of the facts known to the defendant, the institution of the prior action was legally

1 tenable,’ as opposed to whether the litigant subjectively believed the claim was 2 tenable.” (Parrish v. Latham & Watkin (2017) 3 Cal.5th 767, 776 (Parrish)). “The 3 elements of a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty are the existence of a 4 fiduciary relationship, breach of fiduciary duty, and damages.” (Oasis West Realty, 5 LLC v. Goldman (2011) 51 Cal.4th 811, 820.) Even the second amended complaint 6 alleged no harm related to its claim of a competing business. (Complaint ¶ 38.) It 7 also repeated false allegations Defendants knew not to be true. (Id.) Based on the 8 allegations of the Complaint, accepted as true, Defendants instituted and maintained 9 the claim knowing it was untenable.

10 Next, Defendants fail to understand that the “interim adverse judgment rule” 11 is used determining probable cause and thus applies to claims and not entire 12 lawsuits. They also attempt to invoke the rule without reference to any order or 13 judgment to which it applies, much less the relevant claim. Notably, the only case 14 cited by Defendants actually defeats their argument. “[E]ven where a ruling is based 15 on the court's evaluation of the merits of the claim, the ruling does not establish the 16 existence of probable cause if the ruling is ‘shown to have been obtained by fraud or 17 perjury.’” (Parrish, 3 Cal.5th at 778; citing Wilson v. Parker, Covert & Chidester 18 (2002) 28 Cal.4th 811, 817.) As noted above, the Complaint alleges perjury 19 (Complaint ¶¶ 18, 23, 40), without which Storix would have no standing and thus no
20 favorable rulings, and Defendants do not do not dispute those allegations.

21 Defendants fail to explain how denial of summary judgment in the Direct Suit 22 establishes probable cause. “[I]f a claim succeeds at a hearing on the merits, then, 23 unless that success has been procured by certain improper means, the claim cannot 24 be ‘totally and completely without merit.’ [Citation.]” (Parrish, supra, 3 Cal.5th at 25 776, underlines added.) The only issue addressed by the court was whether Storix 26 had “standing to bring this suit” given the fraudulent act of ratification by which 27 Defendants attempted to escape liability. (MTS RJN, Ex. 9 at p. 144.) The court 28 didn’t address any claims of the Direct Suit, finding only that “[i]t is disputed

1 whether this ratification and authorization is sufficient.” (Ibid.) Whether the lawsuit 2 was properly approved is irrelevant because Defendants aren’t being sued for not 3 obtaining proper approval. Notably, “[I]f denial of summary judgment was induced 4 by materially false facts submitted in opposition, equating denial with probable 5 cause might be wrong. Summary judgment might have been granted but for the false 6 evidence.” (Antounian v. Louis Vuitton Malletier (2010) 189 Cal. App. 4th 438, 451, 7 underline added.) This is exactly what Defendants did.<sup>1</sup>

8 Johnson stated facts in the Complaint that establish Defendants lacked 9 probable cause in bringing the Direct Suit against him. Johnson need only show a 10 minimum possibility of prevailing on the cause of action. Defendants produced no 11 evidence to defeat Johnson’s assertion that they lacked probable cause in bringing or 12 maintaining the malicious claim. (Complaint ¶ 38.)

13 B. Claim 2: Breach of Fiduciary Duty – Defendants are the Proper 14 Party and Johnson’s Claim is Not Barred by Res Judicata

15 The Defendants, as majority shareholders in a close corporation, have a 16 fiduciary duty to minority shareholders (Complaint ¶ 31) and are thus liable for any 17 injuries they impose on the minority.

18 1. Johnson’s Claim is Properly Asserted Against the Defendants

19 It doesn’t matter whether Defendants committed tortuous acts and deprived 20 Johnson rights in their capacity as majority shareholders, officers or directors.
21 "Shareholders, officers, and directors of corporations have been held personally 22 liable for intentional torts when they knew or had reason to know about but failed to 23 put a stop to tortious conduct." (PMC, Inc. v. Kadisha (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 1368, 24 1379-1381.) “A corporate officer or director is, in general, personally liable for all

25 <sup>1</sup> Johnson argued the board didn’t approve the lawsuit before it was filed and that 26 Defendants couldn’t ratify it two years later because they were not disinterested.
27 Storix argued that it was ratified by a majority of board members, but wouldn’t say 28 which ones. Summary judgment was denied because Johnson didn’t specifically identify the directors who ratified the lawsuit in his motion.

1 torts which he authorizes or directs or in which he participates, notwithstanding that 2 he acted as an agent of the corporation and not on his own behalf.” (The Committee
3 for Idaho’s High Desert, Inc. v. Yost, 92 F.3d 814, 823 (9th Cir. 1996).) “[T]he true 4 rule is, of course, that an agent is liable for his own acts, regardless of whether the 5 principal is liable or amenable to judicial action.” (Frances T. v. Village Green
6 Owners Assn. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 490, 505, quoting James v. Marinship Corp. (1944)
7 25 Cal. 2d 721, 742–43.)

8 Defendants self-approved an exclusive shareholder agreement between Storix 9 and themselves that ensured they would always retain the Storix board majority.
10 (Complaint ¶ 16; See also ¶ 33.) Liability is imposed on shareholders who enter into 11 a “shareholders’ agreement, which relates to any phase of the affairs of a close 12 corporation, including but not limited to management of its business, ... .” (Cal.
13 Corp. Code § 300(b).) “An agreement of the type referred to in subdivision (b) shall, 14 ... impose upon each shareholder who is a party thereto liability for managerial acts 15 performed or omitted by such person pursuant thereto that is otherwise imposed by 16 this division upon directors, ... .” (Cal. Corp. Code § 300(d).)

17 “The alter ego doctrine does not immunize officers, directors or shareholders 18 of a corporation from tortious conduct that they themselves commit in the course of 19 acting for the corporation.” (Filet Menu, Inc. v. CCL&G., Inc. (2000) 94 Cal.Rptr.2d 20 438, 477.) “One who assumes to act as an agent is responsible to third persons as a 21 principal for his acts in the course of his agency, ... [w]hen his acts are wrongful in 22 their nature.” (Cal. Civ. Code § 2343.) “As the separate personality of the 23 corporation is a statutory privilege, it must be used for legitimate business purposes 24 and must not be perverted. When it is abused it will be disregarded and the 25 corporation looked at as a collection or association of individuals, so that the 26 corporation will be liable for acts of the stockholders or the stockholders liable for 27 acts done in the name of the corporation.” (Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 28 Cal.3d 290, 300, underline added.)

1 Defendants provide no authority to defeat Johnson’s assertion that they are 2 personally liable for wrongful acts they commit under the guise of Storix. Johnson 3 alleged all elements of breach of fiduciary duty for each separate claim, and alleged 4 facts sufficient to hold Defendants personally responsible for their conduct.

5 2. Res Judicata Does Not Bar Johnson’s Fiduciary Duty Claim

6 Noting Johnson’s allegations of breach of fiduciary duty, Defendants 7 generally state that “These allegations were previously litigated in the Derivative 8 Suit.” (Motion at p. 8.) Although res judicata applies to a claim, not an allegation, 9 Defendants nevertheless fail to reference any claims or allegations in any prior 10 litigation. They broadly assert that because “‘plaintiff failed to meet the burden of 11 proof’ on all causes of action in the Derivate Suit’ including breach of fiduciary 12 duty.” (Id. at p. 9.) Johnson is not barred from bringing a different claim of breach of 13 fiduciary duty against them. Defendants blur the distinction between different claims 14 by lumping them together as “breach of fiduciary duty”, which is not itself a cause 15 of action, but only a label.

16 Defendants also misinterpret “harm suffered” as indistinctly applicable to res 17 judicata and the cause of action it pertains to. Harm resulting from a breach of 18 fiduciary duty is distinguishable from harm to a primary right. The case cited by 19 Defendants states that res judicata acts as “a bar to a subsequent action by the 20 plaintiff based on the same injury to the same right, even though he presents a 21 different legal ground for relief.’ [Citations.]” (Boeken v. Philip Morris USA, Inc.
22 (2010) 48 Cal.4th 788, 797 (Boeken) [italics in original].) Defendants argue that, 23 because Johnson previously alleged “loss of money in defending a suit” he is 24 precluded from bringing a claim for “being denied distributions from Storix profits, 25 as all profits were spent in litigation.” They argue that “the compensation Johnson 26 seeks ... is the very same harm previously litigated ... .” (Motion at p. 9.) Res
27 judicata only bars the cause of action if based on the same harm to Johnson’s 28 primary right, not similar harm to Johnson’s bank account.

1           “The primary right was the right not to be wrongfully deprived of spousal 2 companionship and affection, and the corresponding duty was the duty not to 3 wrongfully deprive a person of spousal companionship and affection.” (Boeken at 4 798, italics in original.) In that case, the plaintiff was barred from bringing a second 5 claim for the same harm (violation of her right not to be deprived companionship)
6 under different legal theories. If afforded Defendants’ interpretation, res judicata
7 would preclude the Boeken plaintiff from suing the same defendant for killing her 8 next husband too (even by different means).

9           Defendants properly cite Boeken in saying, “Under this theory, ‘[a] cause of 10 action . . . arises out of an antecedent primary right and corresponding duty and the 11 delict or breach of such primary right and duty by the person on whom the duty
12 rests.’ Of these elements, the primary right and duty and the delict or wrong 13 combined constitute the cause of action in the legal sense of the term. . . .’ (McKee v.
14 Dodd (1908) 152 Cal. 637, 641.)” But Defendants argue that “the primary right 15 asserted by Johnson is the right not to be wrongfully deprived of his rights as a 16 minority shareholder.” (Motion at p. 8.) Defendants misinterpret the primary rights 17 theory as a catch-all that allows them, as majority shareholders, to group all their 18 wrongs into a single cause of action, thereby protecting them from liability for 19 various and repeated wrongs committed in violation of Johnson’s rights.

20           Johnson’s current and prior actions contain some of the same facts, but the 21 “causes of action” (as they pertain to res judicata) are entirely different. Johnson has 22 a primary right to be free from legal harassment, and not to be deprived 23 indemnification he’s entitled to, money owed to him, or property taken without 24 consideration. The causes of action in the Complaint are unique in that, even where 25 they involve injury to similar primary rights, they involve Defendants committing 26 different wrongs. Res judicata doesn’t bar future claims against Defendants based on 27 different or continuing wrongful acts.

1 Defendants argue that a current claim related to “advancement of Defendants’
2 defense costs” is identical to claims in Johnson’s cross-complaint and the Derivative 3 Suit. (Motion at p. 13.) There are no claims in Johnson’s cross-complaint related to 4 litigation expenses, and nothing in the Derivative Suit or any court order refers to 5 legal actions or funds taken by Defendants to defeat the Derivative Suit itself. A 6 court found only that the bylaws adopted by the Defendants mandated advancement 7 of their fees against Johnson’s cross-complaint. (MTS RJN, Ex. 7 at p. 117.) Also, 8 no claim was ever asserted and no issue determined regarding Defendants 9 “direct[ing] Attorney-Defendants to obstruct, interfere and otherwise defend against 10 claims in the Derivative Suit brought on Storix’s behalf.” (Complaint. ¶ 46.)

11 C. Claim 3: The Conversion Claim is Not Barred by the Statute
12 of Limitations

13 Defendants argue that Johnson is bound by the 3-year statute of limitations for 14 his Conversion claim, recognizing but incorrectly applying the “delayed discovery 15 rule.” The discovery rule provides that the accrual date of a cause of action is 16 delayed until the plaintiff is aware of his or her injury and its negligent cause. (Jolly 17 v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 1103, 1109.) Johnson alleged that he first 18 discovered the conversion in December 2018, informed Defendants of the discovery, 19 and received no response. (Complaint ¶ 30.)

20 Defendants argue that Johnson was afforded certain rights to inspect Storix’s 21 records, thus could have discovered the conversion earlier. (Motion at p. 10.) 22 Whether Johnson could have discovered the conversion earlier is irrelevant. The 23 statute of limitations is tolled at least until Johnson had reason to suspect the 24 conversion had occurred. “He has reason to suspect when he has ‘notice or 25 information of circumstances to put a reasonable person on inquiry’.” (Norgart v.
26 Upjohn Co. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 383, 397–398, original italics.) Johnson’s inability to 27 discover the conversion was amplified because, “While Johnson was on medical 28 leave in 2011-2013, Defendants changed the company’s accounting method,

1 amended tax filings, and thereafter directed Attorney-Defendants to prevent Johnson 2 from accessing financial records which would have raised his suspicions and 3 provided a reasonable opportunity for Johnson to discover this fact earlier.” 4 (Complaint ¶ 8.) In any case, even if the three-year statute of limitations began to 5 accrue, as Defendants claim, when Judge Trapp allowed him limited access to 6 Storix’s records, the order was issued in September 2016, so the Complaint was still 7 filed within the statute of limitations.

8 In addition, “Ordinarily the statute of limitations applying in conversion 9 actions [] begins to run from the date of the conversion even though the injured 10 person is ignorant of his rights. [Citations.] This rule, however, is not absolute; for 11 example, where there has been a fraudulent concealment of the facts the statute of 12 limitations does not commence to run until the aggrieved party discovers or ought to 13 have discovered the existence of the cause of action for conversion. [Citations.]” 14 (Strasberg v. Odyssey Group, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal.App.4th 906, 916-917.) As alleged 15 throughout the Complaint, Defendants “[a]t all times since being issued their stock, 16 ... maintained sole possession and exclusive control of all accounts and records of 17 Storix” (Complaint ¶ 32), “misrepresented and concealed the conversion of 18 Johnson’s retained earnings at a time when Johnson placed faith and trust in 19 Defendants, and Defendants acted to prevent Johnson from discovering the 20 conversion until late 2018”. (Id. ¶ 51.)

21 Johnson alleged all elements of conversion, including delayed discovery.
22 Defendants cannot escape liability for their theft, after which they imposed years of 23 litigation on Johnson and Storix to try and conceal.

24 D. Claim 4: The Economic Interference Claim Does Not Fail as 25 a Matter of Law

26 The Complaint properly alleges that “Defendants were not parties to the 27 contract”, “had personal interest in interfering with the contract”, “acted with 28 specific intent to interfere with Johnson’s right to receive the benefits of the

1 contract”, and “knew their actions would result in a breach of contract.” (Complaint
2 ¶ 55.) Facts supporting each element are also alleged. (Id. ¶¶ 11, 29.) The Complaint 3 states all elements of economic interference, and Defendants provide no reference to 4 judicially noticeable facts to the contrary. Defendants’ motion to dismiss must 5 therefore be denied. Johnson nevertheless responds to Defendants arguments.

6 1. Defendants Had Knowledge of the Oral Contract

7 Defendants allege they had no knowledge of the existence of the oral contract 8 between Johnson and Storix in 2003. (Motion at p. 11.) Defendants also allege that 9 Johnson made admissions in various pleadings that showing they had no knowledge 10 of the contract but make no reference to any such pleadings.

11 Storix, under the direction of all Defendants, counter-sued Johnson for 12 declaratory judgment of ownership of his copyrights on the basis that Johnson 13 agreed to transfer copyright ownership to Storix via an oral assignment. They 14 benefitted from their position that Johnson transferred all his rights via that 15 agreement by assuming exclusive control of the SBAdmin software he created.

16 Defendants assert that “Defendants could not possibly know of the existence 17 of an oral contract between Johnson and himself” and Johnson “never raised the 18 issue of monies owed” in the copyright litigation. (Motion at p. 11.) Yet, Defendants 19 obtained a judgment on Storix’s behalf in the copyright litigation based on their 20 assertion of an oral contract between Johnson and Storix. After applying contract
21 interpretation principles to determine the meaning of the term “all assets” in Storix’s 22 2003 Annual Report, this Court found, and the Ninth Circuit affirmed, that “[t]he 23 Annual Report qualified as a ‘note or memorandum’ that was signed by Johnson and 24 memorialized a transfer of assets.” (Complaint ¶ 22.) There is sufficient evidence of 25 a contract when “[t]here is a note, memorandum, or other writing sufficient to 26 indicate that a contract has been made, signed by the party against whom 27 enforcement is sought or by its authorized agent or broker.” (Cal. Civ. Code § 28 1624(3)(D).)

1                                   2. Defendants Are Strangers to the Oral Contract

2           Defendants argue in a single paragraph that they are “agents of Storix” and a 3 “contracting party”, then “neither a party nor the agent of a party”. (Motion at p. 12.)
4 Defendants then conclude they are “agents of Storix and therefore cannot be liable 5 for interfering with what is essentially their own contract.” (Id. at pp. 11-12.) The 6 cases cited by Defendants also conflict with their argument that they’re “not 7 strangers” to the contract.

8           “[S]trangers [are] interlopers who have no legitimate interest in the scope or 9 course of the contract's performance. [citations] As such, “a contracting party is 10 incapable of interfering with the performance of his or her own contract[.] ...
11 [citations] Because the subcontracts at issue here provided for [defendant’s] 12 performance, neither [defendant] nor his agents can be liable for the tort of 13 interfering with the subcontracts.” (Ibid.) (PM Group, Inc. v. Stewart (2007) 154 14 Cal.App.4th 55, 65.) Defendants are strangers because they have no interest in “the 15 scope” of the contract and the contract is not dependent on their “performance”. The 16 fact that Defendants are agents of Storix doesn’t make it “their own contract” unless 17 their performance, as agents, is necessary to the contract. Defendants interfered with 18 Storix’s performance, not their own. They are shareholders with a personal interest 19 in interfering with the contract – not in its scope or performance.

20                                   3. Manager’s Privilege Is No Defense to Economic Interference

21           In asserting manager’s privilege, Defendants essentially argue that, as agents 22 of Storix, they intentionally induced Storix to breach its contract for its own benefit.
23 There’s no benefit to Storix in breaching the contract in which it obtained the 24 software product that generates its only revenue. Manager’s privilege is nevertheless 25 an invalid defense that cannot be asserted by Defendants given they obtain personal 26 financial gain by interfering with the contract. “The manager's privilege does not 27 exempt a manager from liability when he or she tortiously interferes with a contract 28 or relationship between third parties. (Klein v. Oakland Raiders, Ltd. (1989) 211

1 Cal.App.3d 67, 80.)” (Asahi Kasei Pharma Corp. v. Actelion Ltd. (2013) 222
2 Cal.App.4th 945, 966–968.)

3 4. Johnson Had an Existing Relationship With Veeam

4 The Complaint states facts contrary to Defendants’ position that “the 5 ‘business opportunity’ with Veeam software was not an existing relationship of 6 Johnson’s” and “the threat of continued litigation is not itself an independent 7 wrongful act by any legal measure sufficient to establish this tort.” (Motion at p. 14.)

8 Storix was engaged for months in negotiations with Veeam. (Complaint ¶ 25.)
9 If Johnson was not an integral part of Storix’s relationship with Veeam, Defendants 10 wouldn’t have belatedly involved Johnson in the contract negotiations. The 11 Complaint states that Defendants knew the relationship existed (Complaint ¶ 56) and 12 that “Johnson attempted to salvage the perpetual license agreement Veeam 13 originally wanted.” (Id. ¶ 25.) Defendants further argue that because Veeam was “a 14 competitor, any expectation of a relationship would not be current and existing but 15 at some time in the future, which is insufficient to sustain Johnson’s claim.” (Motion 16 at p. 14.) There is no authority to support that position, since a relationship clearly 17 must be established before engaging in negotiations with a competitor.

18 Defendants next argue that “the threat of continued litigation is not itself an 19 independent wrongful act[.]” (Motion at p. 14.) Defendants subordinate the facts 20 actually stated in the Complaint. “[Defendants] would not approve the sale unless 21 Johnson dismissed all personal and derivative claims against them and used his 22 share of the sale to pay the outstanding debt they imposed on Storix for their 23 defense. Defendants also refused to dismiss the Direct Suit against Johnson unless 24 he signed the deal.” (Complaint ¶ 25.) The Complaint properly alleges wrongful 25 conduct in that Defendants “attempt[ed] to extort Johnson with the threat of 26 continued litigation and deepening financial hardship.” (Id. ¶ 56.) “It was therefore 27 filed in an ‘extortive context’ and not in furtherance of a right of petition. As a 28

1 matter of law, it was illegal and not a protected activity.” (Cohen v. Brown (2009)
2 173 Cal.App.4th 302, 314.)

3 “Defendants knew the interference was substantially certain to occur as a 4 result of their actions and intended the interference to occur unless Johnson accepted 5 their demands. As a result of Defendants' acts, the economic relationship was 6 disrupted.” (Id. ¶ 56.) The Complaint states facts sufficient to support all elements of 7 interference with prospective economic advantage, including wrongful conduct and 8 disruption of the relationship.

9 E. Johnson Properly Alleged Breach of Contract Against 10 Defendants

11 Upon terminating his involvement in Storix, Johnson is owed substantial 12 money under the contract. (Complaint ¶ 29.) Defendants spent Storix into 13 insolvency litigating against Johnson to conceal Storix’s financial records and shield 14 themselves from liability, and used all Storix’s profits to pay their personal legal 15 expenses while disregarding Storix’s own financial obligations. (Complaint ¶¶ 30-16 35.) Under such circumstances, Storix’s debts fall on the Defendants.

17 1. Johnson Does Not Need to Pierce the Corporate Veil, 18 Nor Can Defendants Hide Behind It

19 Defendants’ sole support for their argument that they cannot be held liable for 20 the acts of Storix is that “a corporation is a legal entity distinct from its shareholders, 21 directors, and officers.” (Motion at p. 15.) Defendants cite a 7th Circuit case, 22 Wachovia Securities, LLC v. Loop Corp (2013) 726 F.3d 899, 908, arguing that 23 Johnson “should not be entitled to now disregard [Storix’s] existence for his own 24 benefit.” (Motion at p. 15.) It appears Defendants are referring to the 7th Circuit’s 25 application of Illinois law, providing that a party “cannot assert the equitable 26 doctrine of piercing the corporate veil to disregard the separate corporate existence 27 of a corporation he himself created to gain an advantage which would be lost under 28 his present contention.” (Ibid.) But Wachovia’s statement was used to apply other

1 Illinois law, wherein, “Defendants have uniformly been denied the opportunity to 2 pierce their own corporate veil in order to avoid liability.” Johnson is not attempting 3 to pierce the corporate veil to avoid liability – Defendants are trying to shield 4 themselves in the corporate veil to avoid liability.

5 “A corporate officer or director is, in general, personally liable for all torts 6 which he authorizes or directs or in which he participates, notwithstanding that he 7 acted as an agent of the corporation and not on his own behalf.” (The Committee for 8 Idaho’s High Desert, Inc. v. Yost, 92 F.3d 814, 823 (9th Cir. 1996).) Their liability, 9 if any, stems from their own tortious conduct, not from their status as directors or 10 officers of the enterprise. (See United States Liab. Ins. Co. v. Haidinger-Hayes, Inc.
11 (1970) 1 Cal.3d 586, 595.) “Directors are liable to third persons injured by their own 12 tortious conduct regardless of whether they acted on behalf of the corporation and 13 regardless of whether the corporation is also liable.” (Frances T. v. Village Green 14 Owners Ass’n. (1986) 42 Cal.3d 490, 504.) “This liability does not depend on the 15 same grounds as ‘piercing the corporate veil,’ on account of inadequate 16 capitalization for instance, but rather on the officer or director's personal 17 participation or specific authorization of the tortious act.” (Ibid.)

18 Defendants cannot hide behind the corporate veil. “Whether the corporate veil 19 should be pierced depends upon the innumerable individual equities of each case.”
20 (United States v. Standard Beauty Supply Stores, Inc. (1977) 561 F.2d 774, 777.)
21 “[C]ourts of equity, piercing all fictions and disguises, will deal with the substance 22 of the action and not blindly adhere to the corporate form.” (Bangor Punta 23 Operations v. Bangor & Aroostook R.R. (1974) 417 U.S. 703, 713.) Liability in may 24 be imposed on those equitable owners of a corporation who “provide inadequate 25 capitalization and actively participate in the conduct of corporate affairs.” (Minton v.
26 Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580.)

27 As argued in Section IV:B\(1\), Defendants are similarly liable as majority 28 shareholders of a close corporation. Johnson entered into a contract with Storix and,

1 Defendants are jointly liable for Storix’s breach because they personally participated 2 in the breach after rendering Storix insolvent and unable to perform its contractual 3 obligations. (Complaint ¶ 61.)

4 2. Res Judicata Does Not Bar the Breach of Contract Claim

5 Defendants argue Johnson’s contract claim is barred by res judicata because 6 he should have sued Storix for breach of contract as part of the prior copyright 7 litigation. They base the argument on the event triggering Storix’s obligation to 8 perform under the contract – the end of Johnson’s involvement in the company. The 9 argument fails for two obvious reasons.

10 First, Defendants misunderstand Johnson’s involvement in Storix when 11 arguing it was terminated when they forced Johnson out of the company in 2014.
12 They ignore that “Johnson used his shares to elect himself to the board in order to 13 continue his involvement in the company and to avoid triggering Storix's obligation 14 to pay for the copyright he then knew Storix could no longer afford.” (Complaint ¶ 15 15.) “Under the law of contracts, parties may expressly agree that a right or duty is 16 conditional upon the occurrence or nonoccurrence of an act or event.” (Platt Pacific, 17 Inc. v. Andelson (1993) 6 Cal.4th 307, 313.) Johnson remained on the board until he 18 chose not to re-elect himself in August 2018. “This finally terminated Johnson's 19 involvement in Storix and triggered Storix's obligation to pay Johnson for his 20 copyrights.” (Id. ¶ 29.)

21 Second, res judicata bars a future claim that could have been raised in prior 22 litigation. Had Johnson chosen to demand compensation for the copyrights in 2014
23 (and Storix refused), Johnson still couldn’t include a breach of contract claim in a 24 copyright infringement action. As set forth in the next sections, no breach of contract 25 claim had accrued until 2018, and contracts are nevertheless only enforceable under 26 state law.

27 //

28 //

1 exclusive rights within the general scope of copyright ...." (17 U.S.C. § 301(b)(3).) 2 Defendants provide no authority or explanation for why this contract claim would be 3 preempted by federal copyright law.

4 F. Claim 6: Johnson’s Claim for Rescission Fails Does Not Fail

5 1. Johnson Does Not Need to Pierce the Corporate Veil as to 6 Defendants for Rescission

7 For the same reasons set forth in Section E\(1\), Defendants cannot hide behind
8 the corporate veil, nor does Johnson need to pierce it.

9 2. Res Judicata Does Not Bar Rescission

10 Johnson doesn’t dispute that “this Court conclusively established Storix as the 11 owner of SBAdmin.” (Motion at p. 18.) The Complaint doesn’t involve a copyright 12 claim, nor does it raise any issues previously decided. Johnson’s rescission claim has 13 not been before any court.

14 A party to a contract may rescind if “the consideration for the obligation of 15 the rescinding party, before it is rendered to him, fails in a material respect from any 16 cause.” (Cal. Civ. Proc. § 1689(b)(4).) Johnson’s rescission claim is simply an 17 alternative to his breach of contract claim. As such, Johnson demands “consideration 18 of the fair value of Johnson's copyrights or, in the alternative, a declaratory 19 judgment of rescission of Johnson's contract with Storix and return of Johnson's 20 copyrights.” (Complaint ¶ 75.) Johnson is not “improperly asking this Court for a 21 new trial or relief from judgment”, but is properly alleging a claim for rescission 22 based on lack of consideration. Res judicata is inapplicable to this case because 23 Johnson’s breach of contract and rescission claims have never been heard in any 24 court, not does Johnson ask this Court to re-decide any previously decided issues.

1           G.     Johnson’s Claim for Indemnification Suffers No Defects

2                   1.     Johnson Does Not Need to Pierce the Corporate Veil as to 3                   Defendants for Indemnification

4           For the same reasons set forth in Section E\(1\), Defendants cannot hide behind
5 the corporate veil, nor does Johnson need to pierce it.

6                   2.     Res Judicata Does Not Bar Indemnification

7           Defendants assert that res judicata applies to Johnson’s indemnification
8 claim. It’s unclear how, since the issue has never decided in any court. Nonetheless, 9 Defendants argument that “Johnson was not the successful party in the Direct Suit” 10 has no bearing on his right to indemnification for the “successful defense of any 11 issues, claims or matters in the Direct Suit.” (Motion at p. 19.) Cal. Corp Code § 12 317(d) and Storix’s bylaws mandate Johnson’s indemnification.

13           Defendants hypocritically argue without authority that Johnson is not entitled 14 to any indemnification under Cal. Corp. Code § 317. They argue that they sued 15 Johnson “as a director” for an act “outside of his role as a director” when he “sought 16 to stand up a competing business for his personal gain.” (Motion at p. 19.) Johnson 17 sued Defendants for acts they committed outside their duties of officers or directors, 18 yet Defendants personally approved Storix indemnifying and advancing their legal 19 defense for all actions. Defendants effectively argue that they, as majority directors, 20 are entitled to use Storix to bring any claim against Johnson, a minority director, as 21 long as they allege he was acting against Storix. And they assert that Johnson isn’t 22 entitled to no recovery even after finally disproving their false claim.

23           A jury found that Johnson didn’t commit the alleged wrongful act, so how 24 could he have done so outside his role of a director? Defendants provide no 25 authority to support their absurd legal conclusion that effectively deprives Johnson 26 both his statutory right to indemnification and due process in obtaining restitution 27 for their wrongful acts. Nonetheless, their argument has no merit. Defendants used 28 Storix to sue Johnson “as a director” and their claim could not have been brought 1 had Johnson not been a director. Indemnification must be provided by the 2 corporation when a director successfully defends a claim brought “by reason of the 3 fact that the person is or was an agent of the corporation.” (Cal. Corp. Code § 319(c) 4 and (d).)

5 No court has ever ruled on Johnson’s statutory right to indemnification or that 6 Defendants are entitled to deny Johnson that right. Johnson properly alleged all 7 elements of an indemnification cause of action. (Complaint ¶¶ 69-71.)

8 IV. CONCLUSION

9 Defendants’ defense of res judicata is inapplicable since they identified no 10 claims or relevant underlying issues that were raised or decided in any prior action.
11 Also, all Johnson’s claims are brought within the applicable statute of limitations.

12 Defendants have not identified any of Johnson’s causes of action that are 13 insufficiently pled. This Court must therefore deny Defendants’ motion to dismiss as 14 to all causes of action. However, if this Court finds Johnson’s Complaint inadequate, 15 he should be freely granted leave to amend.
